Town Council Holds March Session

The Kewanna town council met for its March session Thursday, March 6, at the town hall. Present were council members Jeff Finke, Dan Birge and Mark Smith; clerk-treasurer, Jenny Kay; Mike Molitor, Danny Winter, Bob Clyde, Danny Chew, John Cochran, Steve McPeck and Karen Good.

Mr. Cochran commended the council on its efforts to provide a rural medical clinic for the area. He recommended and outlined a four-step process for starters, including working with the Regenstrief group from Purdue University to gain certification as an underserved area. He also recommended forming and chartering a Kewanna Medical Clinic Task Force, designing a detailed survey to be administered to the residents of Kewanna, and the enlisting of area medical providers in the effort. Any Kewanna area resident that is interested in serving on this task force should contact the town clerk-treasurer at 574-653-2112.

Bob Clyde presented the monthly fire department report noting one town call (medical) and four township calls (three fire and one medical).

Clyde also asked the council to pursue getting a property in his neighborhood cleaned up or at least boarded up as it is a haven for pests and unwelcome guests.

Danny Chew requested permission to take home the snow plow truck when heavy snow is predicted overnight making it easier for him to get to work the next morning. The council expressed some concern about letting the dump truck/snow plow leave town but okayed the use of the town pickup whenever heavy snowfall might be a problem. He also suggested the council seek additional summer help when renovation work begins at the sewer treatment plant so he can be part of the process. This will also free up mowing time so installation of new meters can move forward. The board took the suggestion under consideration.

Town superintendent Mike Molitor presented his monthly report. Most of the month was spent dealing with high water problems or plowing snow. The pump at the No. 1 lift station was not pumping. It was feared that it would have to be pulled for repairs but it was subsequently determined the line to the pump was plugged and just needed to be back flushed. A damaged meter pit was repaired. Some left over cold patch was used to start filling some of the potholes. The assistant superintendent did some cleaning and sorting of accumulated paperwork at both well houses. A lengthy power outage caused problems at one point. Town employees were getting ready to start the

Callers phishing for personal information

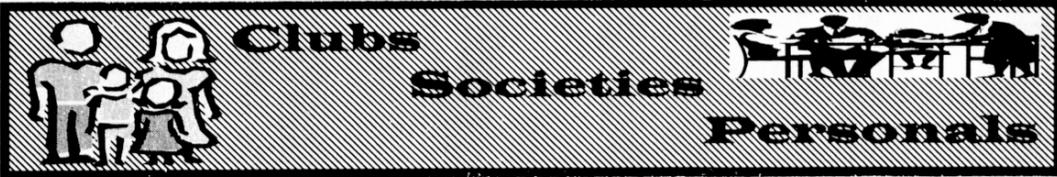

The Better Business Bureau of Northern Indiana reports it has received calls from consumers telling them they have received a call indicating they will be issued a new Social Security card, and the caller needs banking information to process the new card. The BBB warns residents to beware of the phishing scam.

The intent of the caller is to throw the consumer off track by identifying himself or herself with something they are familiar with, and getting the consumer to give information before they realize it is a scam. NEVER give information to anyone who is asking for it. Reputable companies, government agencies, or other entities will not do business in this manner.

Following services, the group enjoyed special decorated cakes by Susette McCormick, ice cream, coffee and drinks. March is Multiple Sclerosis Awareness Month

Pat Smith
 Pulaski Memorial Hospital
 Multiple sclerosis (MS) is a nervous system disease that affects your brain and spinal cord. It damages the myelin sheath, the material that surrounds and protects your nerve cells.
 This damage slows down or blocks messages between your brain and your body, leading to the symptoms of MS. These symptoms may include:

- Visual disturbances
- Muscle weakness
- Trouble with coordination and balance
- Sensations such as numbness, prickling, or "pins and needles"
- Thinking and memory

problems
 No one knows what causes MS. It may be an autoimmune disease, which happens when your body attacks itself. Multiple sclerosis affects women more than men.
 It often begins between the ages of 20 and 40. Usually, the disease is mild, but some people lose the ability to write, speak or walk. There is no cure for MS, but medicines may slow it down and help control symptoms. Physical and occupational therapy may also help.

EARTH TALK

Questions & Answers
About Our Environment

Dear EarthTalk: What is causing the dramatic decline in honeybee populations in the U.S. and elsewhere in recent years, and what is being done about it?-- James Harris, Akron, Ohio

Kids everywhere may revel in the fact that bees are no longer stinging them as frequently on playgrounds and in backyards, but the decline in honey bee populations in the U.S. and elsewhere signals a major environmental imbalance that could have far-reaching implications for our agricultural food supply.

Brought here from Europe in the 1600s, honeybees have become widespread across North America and are bred commercially for their abilities to pollinate crops—90 different farm-grown foods including many fruits and nuts depending on them—and produce honey. But in recent years populations across the continent have plummeted by as much as 70 percent, and biologists are still scratching their heads as to why and what to do about the problem which they have termed "colony collapse disorder" (CCD).

Many believe that our increasing use of chemical pesticides and herbicides, which bees ingest during their daily pollination rounds, are largely to blame. Commercial beehives are also subjected to direct chemical fumigation at regular intervals to ward off destructive mites. Another leading suspect is genetically modified crops, which may generate pollen with compromised nutritional value.

It may be that the build-up of both synthetic chemicals and genetically modified crop pollen has reached a "tipping point," stressing bee populations to the point of collapse. Lending credence to this theory is that organic bee colonies, where chemicals and genetically modified crops are avoided, are not experiencing the same kind of catastrophic collapses, according to the non-profit Organic Consumers Association.

Bee populations may also be vulnerable to other factors, such as the recent increase in atmospheric electromagnetic radiation as a result of growing numbers of cell phones and wireless communication towers. The increased radiation given off by such devices may interfere with bees' ability to navigate. A small study at Germany's Landau University found that bees would not return to their hives when mobile phones were placed nearby. Further research is currently underway in the U.S. to determine the extent of such radiation-related phenomena on bees and other insect populations.

Biologists also wonder if global warming may be exaggerating the growth rates of pathogens such as the mites, viruses and fungi that are known to take their toll on bee colonies. The unusual hot-and-cold winter weather fluctuations in recent years, also blamed on global warming, may also be wreaking havoc on bee populations accustomed to more consistent seasonal weather patterns.

A recent gathering of leading bee biologists yielded no consensus, but most agreed that a combination of factors is likely to blame. "We're going to see a lot of money poured into this problem," says University of Maryland entomologist Galen Dively, one of the nation's leading bee researchers. He reports that the federal government plans an allocation of $80 million to fund research in connection with CCD. "What we're looking for," Dively says, "is some commonality which can lead us to a cause."

Grass Creek School History

THE CULTIVATION

From those small beginnings – a class of five graduates, a faculty of two teachers, a curriculum of academic subjects – the school has come a long way. Seven trustees, thirteen principals, and scores of teachers have served the high school of Wayne Township. Majesty High School, the title given the school by its first trustee, E. J. Buchanan, was commissioned by the State of Indiana during the 1905-06 school year. It is not certain how long the school was called Majesty High School. Some questionnaires indicated the name officially changed around 1912 and a 1917 report to the Superintendent of Public Instruction shows the name at that time to be Grass Creek High School; however, many people referred to the school as Majesty High School as late as 1923.

CURRICULUM

As stated earlier, the early years of Majesty/Grass Creek High School taught the purely academic curriculum. Four years of grammar were required, as were three years of math, four years of history, and four years of Latin. Political geography (agriculture) was also required. As the years went on, other subject fields were added as the school grew and more teachers were employed. Grass Creek School's first band was organized in 1921 under the direction of May Kumler. Without the records, which perished with the fire, it is impossible to say when such new subjects as biology, shorthand, typing, health and safety, physics, home economics, business, sociology, psychology and industrial arts were added to the curriculum. By 1956, Grass Creek High School offered one of the broadest curriculums to choose from in Fulton County, as there were 39 different courses to choose from.

STUDENT ACTIVITIES

One needs only to read a history of education to know that early extra-curricular activities were frowned upon by both educators and patrons. This was especially true of physical education activities. Students of early Majesty High School were not unlike other high school students of that time – they wanted outside activities. Probably the earliest form of extracurricular activities in Majesty High School were the debate societies. At least two such societies are remembered – the Rileys and the Athenians. Debates were of an intramural nature and no contests with other schools were held.

Many games were played before school and during the noon hour. Early favorites were black man, dare base, baseball, fox-and-geese, ice skating, and (as one questionnaire indicated) fighting when teachers were not around.

Organized sports probably started with the Majesty Athletic Club, which was organized in 1905. Members of this club were called MACs. They met in the old Grass Creek Common School (Everett Cunningham's residence). This club had no connection with the school as one did not need to be in school to belong, although most members were high school students. They had uniforms and played many baseball games with various other towns and villages. This urge to organize teams was also going on in other schools throughout Indiana and the nation at this time. Although most early educators fought the movement of sports into schools, the organization of teams continued and finally school authorities realized that if sports were to continue, they should be under school supervision.

There are no records or memories of the first interscholastic contest with another school. There is a belief by some that the first interscholastic contests were in baseball during the 1915-16 school year. About this time, however, basketball, soon to be king in Indiana, was growing popular with the boys at Old Majesty High. An outside court was prepared behind the school building. During the 1915-16 school year, Mr. S. Earl Rouch, superintendent of Fulton County Schools, and then principal of Majesty High School, organized and coached a basketball team that represented Wayne Township. They had a fine team consisting of Al McLochlin, Archie Wills, Jack and Arthur Burns, John Douglass, and Harley Miller. They won most of their games. Games were played on the outside court in the fall and in the old Catholic Church in the winter. Soon the church building became too small and practices were held in the Kewanna gym when possible. Games were played away with schools that had gyms. With basketball gaining popularity in the early 1920s, the patrons began to come and watch their boys play ball. Grass Creek played as curtain raisers to many Kewanna High School games. Agitation for a gym started around 1923 and continued to rise until a gym was constructed in 1928. It was the largest gym in the county at that time and the Fulton County tournament was played there in 1928 and 1929. It would be almost impossible to find the win and loss data on the teams representing Majesty/Grass Creek High School. We know that many fine teams have represented the school. Grass Creek never captured a sectional tourney (as of the writing of this history), but won the county tourney twice, in 1940 and 1941. The Panthers won several four-way tournaments. Probably the greatest team in the win/loss department was the 1936 team, which went through its 20 scheduled games undefeated. It was also during the 1936 basketball season that the team got its name, the Panthers. The members of that great team all purchased a black basketball shoe called "black panther". The boys began calling themselves the Black Panthers. Somewhere along the line the "black" was dropped. The school song was adopted during the later Majesty High School days. May Kumler wrote the words and applied them to the Illinois Loyalty tune. There have, however, been a few minor additions and subtractions of the original words.

The first annual was published in 1940. It is uncertain when the first school paper was published but it is believed around 1938-39. The title of the first paper "Panther Scratches" is still used today.

The first school plays were presented in the old Majesty Athletic Club where a stage was built. Later a temporary stage was built in the assembly in the old building and plays were presented. During the 1920s and early 30s, several minstrels were presented.

Grass Creek School has not been without tragedy. In the earlier days, Ruth Linden was killed and Nellie Walsh injured when a team ran away with the school hack. Later, in 1939, seven Grass Creek juniors were injured in a bus/street car accident in Chicago on their junior trip. In 1937, Old Majesty High burned!

After the fire destroyed Old Majesty, a new school was built connected with the gym, which had been saved. The building, now Grass Creek School (officially Wayne Township School) was built under the supervision of township trustee Loyd Rouch and his advisory board of Alpha Hoesel, Lawrence Funk and Harry Hiatt. The architect was Henry C. Wolf and the construction firm was W. R. Dunkin and Sons.

TRANSPORTATION

To students today, probably one of the sights to see would be the coming and going of alumni in the older days. Transportation was provided the common (elementary) pupils in horse-drawn hacks. High school students had to furnish their own transportation. Most of the early students who lived farther than walking distance used the horse and buggy for transportation. The horses were kept in several barns during the school day. Several barns used for this purpose were Melvin Thomas's, Heward's, Tommy Harrison's, Janie Albro's, and Grace Downs'. A fee of a dollar a month was usually charged. When roads were very muddy many rode horseback. When the snow was high, boats were often pulled by horses over the snow in place of the hack. There are many conflicting theories on when the first motor bus was used, but evidence leads us to believe around 1923-24.

THE GOLDEN HARVEST

Space and time have permitted us to only scratch the surface of what could have been written. One lesson that we have learned well is that the alumni, students, faculty and community can well feel proud of the high school. After doing this research on the school, one can feel the spirit as one walks down the rows of pictures in the "hall of fame". One can almost hear the sounds of yesteryears, sounds of teachers' lecturing, laughter, cheers from the gymnasium and playgrounds. One can see the changing styles in the various photographs. Yes, the students are thankful to the community for providing a high school, and for the many fine memories that going through high school brings. Thanks also to the community for the fine education that has enabled so many of the graduates to go forth and make fine citizens they have and will become.

We call this section "The Golden Harvest" because education is a planting, a cultivation and harvest of preparation for young people to meet the needs of the life they will live. That was true 50 years ago (now 102 years) when the first graduates came forth from Majesty High School, and it is true on the 50th anniversary when the 14 members of the Class of '56 will go forth from the institution which began its history a half a century ago. With the graduation of 14 seniors in 1956, Majesty/Grass Creek High School had graduated a total of 558 students, truly a "golden harvest".

Volunteer drivers needed

Volunteer drivers are being sought to help with the Road to Recovery Program. The volunteers will drive cancer patients from their homes to their cancer related treatments and tests. This transportation could involve a round trip to Logansport for radiation therapy. The Road to Recovery volunteer would need to provide his/her own vehicle and gas for the trip.

However, American Cancer Society representatives hope that "in the very near future, we will be providing gas cards for use with this program."

If interested in becoming a Road to Recovery volunteer driver, call Shelby Peck at the Mishawaka American Cancer Society office at 866-522-3115 or Joan Lauder at 574-946-2180.

Four robins were sighted the first weekend of March by Linda Garner, Wilma Wilson and Jackie Heidenreich. So Mother Nature, get your act together; the robins say spring has arrived!

Leonard and Nancy Evers were in Indianapolis Monday, March 3. They had an enjoyable time as overnight houseguests of their daughter, Diane Evers. Joining them in the evening for a visit over supper were Leonard and Nancy's son, John Evers.

Don and Pauline Scales traveled to Ft. Wayne Tuesday, March 4. They took care of some business early in the day. Afterward, they were joined by their daughter, Ellen Heiden of Columbia City, for lunch and a chat.

Mathilda Lamb had company Wednesday, March 5. Stopping by late in the day while running some errands, was her niece, Claudia Winegardner.

Tom and Barb LaFollette spent Thursday, March 6, in the Kokomo area. They attended the funerals of family friends, Melva Smith of Greentown and Mason Kleiber of Kokomo. They also visited with Bud and Ingrid Landis and Angie, Mary, Mike and Joe Martino at Martino's Italian Villa restaurant. Upon their return to this area, they stopped in Rochester and joined their daughter and her family, Karina and Terry Bohac, Shelby and Nick, for supper.

Jerry and Kay Brown and Kay's mother, Mary K. Williamson of Winamac, were in Rochester Thursday evening. They had an exciting time attending a girls' basketball game. The Browns' granddaughter, Leighnee Smith, is a player for Rochester.

Jackie Heidenreich had company Thursday. Coming over late in the day for a visit and bringing along supper was her son, Roger Vogel of Rochester.

Dennis and Susan Wilson of Greensburg arrived Friday, March 7, for an overnight working visit with Dennis's mother, Lois Wilson. They tackled some chores around the house while it was still daylight. In the evening, they looked through slides of family trips that were taken when Dennis was younger.

Construction set to begin on new Ivy Tech Campus in Logansport

(STATEHOUSE)- Sen. Tom Weatherwax (R-Logansport) announced construction of the new Ivy Tech Campus in Logansport will begin this year. The new permanent facility will be built using $16 million in funds appropriated from both the State Budget Committee and private money.

"I am very pleased this exciting and necessary project is now moving forward," Weatherwax said. "We have worked hard over the years with Ivy Tech and the people of Logansport to build support, negotiate funding, and see this project through."

The 81,880 square foot building will be built on 59 acres of land donated by the college and will replace existing leased space in Logansport. The new structure will house eight academic schools and an academic skill center. In addition, faculty offices, student common areas, a library, bookstore, meeting rooms and a wellness center for faculty, staff and students will also be located in the building.

"Without the help and leadership of Rep. Rich McClain (R-Logansport), we would not have been able to facilitate the progress of this venture," Weatherwax continued. "I expressly thank Rep. McClain and all those involved that put forth effort to bring the new Ivy Tech campus to a reality."

Ivy Tech-Logansport was established in 1972 and has been at its current location since 1983. It has seen enrollment continue to increase over the past several years and has become a focal point within the community. In addition, it is the only higher education institution within thirty miles of Logansport.

Weatherwax represents Senate District 18, which includes Cass, Fulton, Kosciusko, Miami, Pulaski and Wabash Counties.
