BMV Partners with Libraries for Online Registration

Public Access Computers at 462 Libraries
INDIANAPOLIS - Visitors to Indiana's public libraries are being encouraged to renew vehicle registrations online at the libraries' public access computers and receive the $5 discount from the Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

Ron Stiver, Commissioner of the Indiana Bureau of Motor Vehicles (BMV), was joined by Laura Johnson, Director of Public Services of the Indianapolis-Marion County Public Library (IMCPL), and Carl Harvey, President of the Indiana Library Federation, at IMCPL's College Avenue Branch to announce that BMV information will be placed by 3,500 computers at 462 libraries throughout the state. Cards will remind customers about the $5 discount for online renewal and provide simple instructions for getting to the BMV Web site and transacting the renewal.

BMV customers have already saved nearly $2.5 million by using the online renewal service, according to Stiver, noting that 23 percent of all registration renewals have been completed online compared to just 6% last year.

"The BMV online option is a fast, secure and easy way for Hoosiers to renew their vehicle registrations and save $5 this year," he said.

He reported that in a survey conducted in February, 2007, 17 percent of BMV customers said that they did not have immediate access to personal computers. Stiver thanked the libraries making the online renewal option available to these Hoosiers through the public access computers.

On behalf of the Indiana Library Federation, Carl Harvey added, "Indiana public libraries have always strived to bring superior service and resources to their patrons as well as making collaborative connections with other organizations. In partnering with the Bureau of Motor Vehicles to provide information cards, Indiana libraries now have yet another resource to share."

Laura Johnson welcomed the opportunity for the Indianapolis-Marion County Public Library to participate in the promotion. "As the largest library system in the state with 23 library locations and over 5 million yearly visitors, IMCPL is pleased to be a center where free access to our public computers will allow large numbers of citizens to take advantage of this important BMV service," Johnson stated.

The $5 discount applies to 2008 registration renewals completed online through October 31, 2008. A customer does not need a registration renewal notice to complete the transaction, but will need:

St. Luke's Sunday school active

The Sunday school students at St. Luke Evangelical Lutheran Church in Winamac have been very active the last few weeks.

On Palm Sunday, the students marched in carrying and waving palms and singing. After the service, they handed out palms to members of the congregation. Louise Gudas taught several members how to weave the leaves into special decorations.

The children sang during the Easter service, after marching in carrying the cross and candles. The children received filled Easter eggs during the congregation's Easter breakfast. The elders, Ken Gudas, Brian Kistler, Glen Zellers, and Alvin Zellers, along with Kathy Zellers, prepared pancakes and sausage to compliment all the goodies carried in by the congregation.

After the breakfast, Pastor Mel Meyer delivered an inspiring sermon and baptized Parker Zeider, son of Rick and Elaine Zeider.

The Sunday school will start a special unit on Paul's travels with stops at Philippi, Ephesus and Jerusalem. The children will get their passports stamped at each stop. Some exciting adventures await on the trip as they follow in Paul's footsteps.

Services begin at 9 a.m. on Sunday with Sunday school following.

Corydon's outdoor scene is spectacular. Adventure seekers can dunk their paddles into the Blue River, hike one of seven community parks, explore winding passageways in caves studded with astonishing natural formations and discover more than 800 picture-perfect scenic areas. Visitors will find award-winning wineries; old-time ice cream parlors; rare plants, herbs and flowers and a host of outdoor activities that are ideal for the whole family.

Information on reservations for all hotels and activities can be found inside the Visitors Guide.

Located along the Ohio River 30 miles west of Louisville, Corydon offers a wide variety of historical attractions. Founded in 1808 when a government surveyor platted land that was settled by the family of Edward Smith, Corydon became popular when General William Henry Harrison, then the Governor of the Northwest Territory and later the ninth president of the United States, would visit the area while enroute to Vincennes. In 1816, Corydon became the state's first capitol, which was when Indiana became the nation's 19th state. Corydon remained the capital until it moved to Indianapolis in 1825.

The city's unique place in Indiana history will be celebrated throughout 2008 during the town's Bicentennial Celebration.

Corydon and Harrison County feature an abundance of caves, hiking trails and O'Bannon Woods State Park that entice visitors to spend hours exploring the area's natural beauty. Other outdoor fun includes golf, outdoor putt putt, indoor mini golf and bicycling.

BY THE WAY.....

Karen J. Good

Well, it finally happened! After years of various group excursions into Chicago, Washington, DC and parts in between, we lost a member of our eight-person team last Thursday on a Chicago outing! Guess we better not plan to go into the tour business!

Diane Tesler, Wade Bussert, Jude Clark (a friend from Frankfort, Kentucky), Joe and I left Kewanna to meet three more friends at the Dune Park South Shore station in Chesterton — Denise Gilbert of Bremen, Clare Hoinville of Niles, Michigan, and Susan Mahoney of South Bend.

We had arranged to take the 9:01 a.m. (Chicago time) train into Randolph Street. We were the first to arrive and I for one was amazed to see the number of vehicles in the parking lot. It was so crowded we had to park in the far end of the overflow parking area. I had heard on the news that the cost of gasoline had pushed up ridership on the South Shore. Denise, a former Kewanna resident, was the next to arrive and then Clare and Susan, two of Diane's students, made the scene.

Diane had arranged the outing to visit the Winslow Homer and Edward Hopper exhibits at the Art Institute. The trip in was uneventful, thank goodness. Eventful happenings by rail or airplane aren't usually good experiences!

As soon as we disembarked we headed for the Art Institute. It's a short jaunt, but Chicago's weather Thursday made it seem longer — rain, snow, wind, etc. About a block from the entrance, we ran into the end of the ticket line. I wasn't familiar with Homer and Hopper, but evidently the rest of the world was! Thankfully, Diane had the foresight to order tickets online so we were able to enter the Institute and browse through the gift shop while waiting on the exhibit to open.

Winslow Homer, a naturalist painter, was born in 1836, and began his artistic career as a magazine illustrator including several Civil War scenes which appeared in Harper's Weekly. He worked in oils until 1873 (which Joe and I enjoyed) and then began working with watercolors. He enjoyed fishing so many of his paintings were seascapes. Some were completed in a fishing village in England where he spent about a year of his life. His other seascapes were done on the coast of Maine where he lived, or the Bahamas, Cuba and Florida where he spent the winter months.

Mr. Homer died in 1910, but obviously his work will live on forever.

Edward Hopper was born in 1882 to a middle-class family in the Hudson River town of Nyack, New York and died in 1967. He studied art in New York City and then went to Paris to pursue his talent. His Paris paintings, however, were not to the taste of the America he returned to so he had to earn his living as an illustrator for advertising and popular fiction for about ten years, which he hated. He then turned to painting American landscapes and cityscapes for which he became well known. Many of his paintings depicted the loneliness and boredom of life in the big city. Several of his works showed the everyday life of people through windows, from the outside looking in. Makes you kind of glad you were never his neighbor! Actually, even though these paintings express his haunting vision, I really enjoyed them. Many of his streetscapes reminded me of Kewanna's two-block business district, before the demise of a half dozen of the buildings.

We limited our visit to the Institute to the special exhibits as we have visited the remaining art collection previously. The Art Institute was founded in 1879 as both a museum and school. Its original location was at the corner of State and Monroe Streets and it opened at its present site (Michigan Avenue and Adams Street) in 1893. Built on rubble from the 1871 Chicago fire, the Institute's collection now encompasses more than 5,000 years of human expression from cultures around the world. A new addition, the Modern Wing, is currently under construction and is scheduled to open in 2009. Totaling 264,000 square feet, the new addition will open the museum's interior to a view of the downtown Chicago skyline and Millennium Park. In fact, a bridge will rise from Millennium Park to connect to the Modern Wing's third floor terrace. The Art Institute hopes that as many as one-third of Millennium Park's million-plus annual visitors will cross the bridge to discover the Art Institute.

Wade, Joe and I exited the exhibits before the rest and decided we need a little nourishment. The plan was a big breakfast and a late lunch, but our stomachs overruled and we sought out a little deli across the street. Joe went back to the Institute to wait on the rest of our crew and Wade and I headed to our usual haunt, Macy's (formerly Marshall Field). Joe was to herd the rest of them that way when they left the Institute.

After reconvening, we headed for the Berghoff Café. This has also been a customary stop for us in Chicago, until it closed in February 2006. We were delighted when we found out it had reopened. The menu isn't quit as extensive as it once was, but everything was very good.

The Berghoff restaurant was opened in 1898 by Herman Joseph Berghoff, who immigrated from Germany in 1870. In December of 2005, Herman and Jan Berghoff, the third generation of Berghoffs to own the restaurant, announced that they would close the restaurant in February 2006. But, in April of that same year, their daughter, Jan, reopened the Berghoff Café for weekday lunch hours only. The dining room of the old restaurant was turned into a private banquet hall called The Century Room.

After reinforcing ourselves (again), we headed back through the rain, fog and wind to Macy's so Wade could buy himself an early birthday present! I'm not sure why he felt the need to do that since his birthday isn't until May. Of course this is a milestone birthday (you know — the one where you find your name on the AARP mailing list and your memory starts to go) so maybe he was afraid he'd forget to treat himself if he waited.

The rest of us cooled our heels at the Wabash Street entrance while Wade made his purchase and then we trooped back to the train station. We all stood in line to buy our return tickets, but as we were gathering to go trackside, we counted heads and only came up with seven! Susan was missing! We all scanned the crowd and checked the nearest station shops. We decided she had probably gone on out to the train platform — but she wasn't there either. Wade and I returned inside for one more look, then Wade walked the length of the train we had planned to board, peering in the cars, still no Susan. Now, five of us, including Susan, were carrying cell phones but we had neglected to exchange phone numbers. Duh! You can tell we are not really into this high tech age. Clare did have Susan's cell phone number at home so she called her husband to get it. We tried calling, but got a message that her phone was not in service — then Clare remembered Susan had turned her phone off when they were in the Art Institute.

We made one last trip back inside and even had her paged in the station — but still no Susan. And, they said they didn't have the capability of paging her on the train. We finally decided she had gotten on the train, so we boarded and headed east. We were quite relieved when Susan greeted us as we disembarked at Chesterton!

As weather conditions were deteriorating, we didn't waste much time saying goodbye. We stopped at a grocery on the south edge of Chesterton to pick up a few things and then slowly made our way south on State Road 49. The weather was really unusual. It was thundering and lightening like a summer rain storm, except it wasn't raining - we were in the throes of a regular blizzard! The snow-covered roadway was quite hazardous. Before we reached U.S. 30 at Valparaiso, we saw five cars in the ditch or the median. I don't believe they were serious accidents, just slide offs. We also came across another slide off on U.S. 30, but by the time we got back to Knox, the snow had turned to rain and the rest of the way home went smoothly. The deer had evidently taken cover from the elements as we saw nary a one.

All in all, it was another good trip and one we will all remember and talk about for a long time.

Consumers Beware! Spring has sprung, and so have the scammers

The Better Business Bureau of Northern Indiana reports it is seeing a significant increase in the number of people who have received mailings informing them they are entitled to huge sums of money. Treat all such offers with great skepticism!

A staff member also reports they received a call from a consumer telling them she received a call supposedly from the executive director of Publishers Clearing House. She was informed that she was in the 100 finalist drawing taking place the next day. The next day she got a call stating she was the third place winner and won $100,000 and wanted to know if she would be home on April 10 so they could present it to her. She needed to pay taxes for Canada since our government changed the laws for money coming in because of all the terrorist activity. She was supposed to wire money to a lady by the name of "Carol" in Montreal, Canada. She told them that she didn't have $850, so they said if she paid $400, they would pay the other $450 and then she would have to pay them back when they presented her check.

US Energy is also out and about again in the Fort Wayne area. The BBB staff has received several calls in the past week. People should be aware of this company if they come to the door and find out about them before signing any type of contract. US Energy is a business out of Chicago. The BBB in Chicago requested documentation of their claims in 2005, but the company declined the request. The BBB report on this company states, "Complainants allege they were subject to misleading sales practices, such as unauthorized enrollment in the program offered, and/or misrepresentation of contract length, and/or guarantees of savings, and/or ability to cancel the contract after the initial three-day period. For more information on the company, go to www.bbb.org or contact the BBB, 800-552-5631.

Joining Barb and JoAnn late Friday evening and remaining until Sunday afternoon, was Barb's grandson, Tom Wilk of Purdue University in West Lafayette. They enjoyed talking, dining together and watching the numerous NCAA play-off games. (They were prevented from getting together at the same time because of work and school schedules.)

Mathilda Lamb was in Fulton, Sunday, March 23. She enjoyed celebrating Easter in the home of Charlie Williams and his family, as well as the Davidson family.

Barb and Tom LaFollette were in Kokomo Wednesday, March 26. Their first stop of the day was to pick up Barb's mother, Pauline Eikenberry. The ladies then dropped Tom off at Martino's Italian Villa. Tom enjoyed visiting with Angie, Mike and Mary Martino while Barb and Pauline did some shopping and then dined together. Later, Tom visited with family friend, Tom Miller, who is recovering from heart bypass surgery at the Regional Health Center.

Mildred McColley had a very enjoyable day Wednesday. Her son, Ron McColley of Frankfort, arrived early in the day to chauffeur her to West Lafayette. They spent the day visiting with Ron's son and his family, Rush and Mendi McColley and, the newest member of the family, Allison.

Don and Pauline Scales had a caller Wednesday. Coming over for a visit and bringing along lunch was their daughter, Phyllis Koontz of Rochester.

Angela Gast of Wake Forest, North Carolina arrived Wednesday for a five-day visit with her parents, Jon and Barb Gast.

Helen Whiteman had visitors Thursday, March 27. Coming over for a chat and bringing along supper were her son and daughter-in-law, Kevin and Monica Whiteman, and their neighbor, Randy, of Pulaski.

Shelby Wagoner of Etna Green was an overnight houseguest of her aunt, Angela Gast, Thursday.

Don Weller and his friend, Linda, of Kathleen, Georgia were weekend houseguests of Don's sister and brother-in-law, Cora Lynn and Howard Clemans.

Jackie Heidenreich had company Friday, March 28. Coming over for a visit and bringing along lunch was her son, Roger Vogel of Rochester.

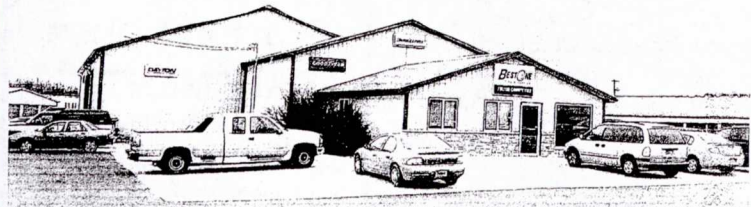

Ruth Cogdill drove to Winamac Friday to spend the weekend with her daughter and son-in-law, Linda and Gordon Ligocki. In the afternoon, Ruth's granddaughter and great-grandchildren, Renata with Doran, Lily, and Roan, came over to say hi. Later in the evening, Dr. Charles Heinsen and his father, Dr. Paul Heinsen, stopped by for a visit. They did not leave until they had a piece of Linda's specialty "grape pie."

Leonard and Nancy Evers were in Rochester Friday evening. They had a nice time as supper guests of their daughter and son-in-law, Janet and C.J. Yocum.

Karina and Terry Bohac, Shelby and Nick, of Rochester were Friday evening guests of Karina's parents, Tom and Barb LaFollette. The family enjoyed watching movies and eating the pizzas the Bohacs had brought.
